

Building a mobile application for searching rental rooms in the Thai Nguyen area on the Android platform.

Nguyen Khanh Linh

Abstract: In the context of increasing demand for rental housing in the Thai Nguyen area, this project focuses on building a mobile application that helps users easily search for and select suitable rental rooms. The project applies an experimental research method to implement the system, aiming to solve the problem of information shortage regarding available rental rooms in the market. Through the development and evaluation of the application, the project aims to provide users with an effective search tool, while contributing to the development of local digital infrastructure.
