

Building an accounting program for sales and accounts receivable at An Tung Loc Company Limited.

Tran Thi Khang

Abstract: In the context of increasingly demanding financial management accuracy, this topic aims to design an automated system for the sales accounting and accounts receivable process for An Tung Loc Company Limited. To achieve this goal, the research applies a method integrating accounting theory with programming experimentation to develop software. The expected results will deliver superior financial management performance, improve the company's decision-making capacity, and enhance its competitiveness in the market.

Keywords: Sales accounting, accounts receivable, automation system, software programming, financial management