

Application of multi-price model inventory management method in warehouse management at Nhan Trung Company Limited - Bac Giang City

Vuong Thi Thao

Abstract: In the context of increasing demand for effective inventory management, this topic focuses on applying the multi-price model inventory management method to optimize costs and operational performance at Nhan Trung Company Limited - Bac Giang City. The objective of the research is to build an intelligent inventory management system, helping the enterprise minimize financial risks and enhance competitiveness in the market. The method combines both theoretical research and experimentation to ensure scientific rigor and suitability for the specific characteristics of business operations. Through this, the topic is expected to contribute significantly to improving supply chain management and enhancing resource efficiency at the company.

Keywords: Inventory management, multi-price model, warehouse management, information technology, business performance