

Homogeneous region-based image segmentation method

Mai Van Thuc

Abstract: This topic focuses on researching and implementing a new method for image segmentation based on homogeneous regions, aiming to meet the high demands in the field of modern image processing. By applying both theoretical and experimental approaches, the work aims to provide an effective solution to the problem of complex image segmentation. The research results promise to make an important contribution to the development of prediction systems and image data analysis.

Keywords: Image segmentation, Homogeneous region, Image processing, Experiment, Application